WHERE THE OCEAN BOILS.

Upheavals That May Be Caused by Submarine Farthquakes

Mariners say that in the midst of the Atlantic, about where the twenty-fifth meridian west from Greenwich crosses the equator, there lies a region of mystery. It is on the line that ships Hunt, both of whom have bronchitis, take from Madeira to Brazil. Only within the past half century has it been sounded and its strange phenomena reported.

One investigator declared that he saw the sea about half a mile from his sit up and be dressed, vessel suddenly disturbed. For about two minutes it boiled up violently as from a subterranean spring. Throughout the day there were observed great patches of discolored water which had exactly the appearance of extensive Maple avenue, entertained as his guest shoals.

These and similar phenomena are frequently observed in this part of the ocean. Often a ship reports that she has experienced a violent shock similar to that which is felt when a rock is struck. Sometimes a great ford, rumbling is heard, like that of a heavy pipes, and the vessel quivers like a leaf in the wind. At another time, in smooth water, a vessel has been known to heel over suddenly, as if she had run on a sand bank.

Before this part of the ocean was as uted to the presence of unmarked sand banks and rocky sheals, and the old charts were marked accordingly. But it must have astonished the mariner somewhat to find that he got no sound-Ings with his deep sea lead immediately after experiencing one of these

Not So Far Wrong, After All. Maid Marion, approaching her fourth birthday, has an imaginary world of her own, in which the principal personage seems to be Mary, her oldest child. For some weeks she talked also of a "Mr. Mary." but a few days ago she announced that "Mr. Mary" had "dled on the consumptions." A few evenings later when she was telling her father of some of Mary's exploits he asked her what had become of "Mr. Mary." "Oh, he died," and her golden curls shook very sadly. "Why did he die?"

Well, you see, Mr. Mary was my husband, and one day I asked him for some money, and he died."

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Care With Which England's Standards Are Preserved.

Every twenty years government offihouse of commons. There are only two standards, the pound weight and the yard measure. The standard pound is of platinum, which despite its weight is no larger than a cubic inch, and, small as it is, the metal of which it is composed is worth £40. The standard vard is a har of bronze thirty-eight inches long on which a yard has been marked off in thirty-six divisions of an inch. The greatest possible care is taken of these two important articles.

When a comparison is being made they are handled with tongs. The pound weight is weighed in the most delicate of chemical balances, and the vard is measured with a micrometer. When they are done with the pound it is wrapped in a special soft paper and laid in a silver gilt case, which is placed in a bronze case, this being put in a wooden box, afterward screwed down and sealed. The yard measure is placed on eight rollers in a mahogany case, which is carefully sealed. Both cases are then put into a leaden casket, which is sealed by soldering. The packing is not yet finished, however, for the lead case is placed in a strong oak box. When this is screwed down it is placed in the bole in the wall. The wall is built up by a mason, and the standards can only be obtained by demolishing it once more.-London Globe.

Pasha is the highest title within the gift of the sultan. It is conferred chiefly on men who achieve distinction in arts and letters or in commerce and is more or less common among the great merchants of Turkey or those who under the old regime had a hand in the collection of taxes. The word "bey" attached to the name of a person indicates that the bearer is distinguished for service of the country. The term "effendi" indicates that the man so addressed is higher in birth, breeding or education than the man speaking and is a variable title, depending on the rank of those carrying on a conversa-
